The Way I See It
Raphael Saadiq

Some of you may remember Raphael Saadiq as the lead vocalist and bassist for Tony! Toni! Tone! Well, he's back with a Grammy nominated album. This album has a vintage sound that makes you think it could have been around thirty years ago! It's full of amazing motown songs, including Sure Hope You Mean It, Just One Kiss, Love That Girl, Keep Marchin', and Oh Girl. Think modern Temptations!

Symphony No. 9 "From the New World"

Antonin Dvorak

Colorful and energetic, this grand work demonstrates the Czech composer's capacity to transform folk traditions into symphonic form. The New World's irresistible melodies, range of expression, and exciting climaxes make it a concert favorite. Here it is conducted with spirit by Marin Alsop, the first woman to direct a major American orchestra.

Carmina Burana

Carl Orff (Philadelphia Orch. w/Eugene Ormandy)

Yes, it's sung in Latin, a language no longer spoken. And, it's based on the earthy, secular poems of a 12th century text - not exactly familiar stuff. Yet, this 1936 work by Orff is readily accessible, with its modern orchestration, infectious rhythms and theatrical style. Listening to Carmina Burana is a sensual and disconcerting experience - one where medieval songs of love and revelry meet 20th century sensibilities! Exuberant fun.

Watina, Andy Palacio & The Garifuna Collective

The music of the Garifuna, descendents of slaves shipwrecked in the Caribbean centuries ago, might have been lost if not for the talent and determination of Andy Palacio. Musician, cultural ambassador and national hero in his native Belize, Palacio gathered accomplished Garifunan musicians to produce this gentle, sweet sounding recording. One of the best world music CDs of 2007, it beautifully reflects the mixed heritage of its creators.
