Bog Child
By Siobhan Dowd

Reserve

An 18-year-old boy in 1981 Northern Ireland finds himself haunted by a girl from 80 AD whose body he finds in a nearby bog.

The Hunger Games
By Suzanne Collins

Reserve

In a future where North America has become a TV-dominated dictatorship, 16-year-old Katniss Everdeen competes in the bloodthirstiest of reality TV shows, in which the only contestant left alive will win a life of luxury. The only rule: don't eat the dead contestants.

What I Saw and How I Lied
By Judy Blundell

Reserve

In this dark, noirish murder mystery, 15-year-old Evie copes with the return of her stepfather from the trenches of WWII and experiences her first romance with his glamorous army buddy, Peter.

Harry, A History: The True Story of a Boy Wizard, His Fans, and Life Inside the Harry Potter Phenomenon
By Melissa Anelli

Reserve

An exhaustive and engaging report of the growth of a multinational, generation-spanning Harry Potter fan culture by the webmistress of the Leaky Cauldron website.

Possibilities of Sainthood
By Donna Freitas

Reserve

Catholic schoolgirl Antonia Lucia Labella prays for two things: her first kiss and sainthood. Unfortunately, these two events seem equally unlikely to happen at the start of this fresh, satisfying romantic comedy.

Book I of Kin: The Good Neighbors
By Holly Black

Reserve

In this fantastic new graphic novel, half-faerie Rue Silver sets out to save her mother--and the mortal world--from a dark threat before her human father is falsely convicted of her murder.

Paper Towns
By John Green

Reserve

Just before he graduates from High School, Quentin's childhood best friend Margo suddenly reappears in his life--then disappears again, just as suddenly. In this hilarious and heart wrenching story, Q sets off on a mission to find out where and why she's gone.
